Ferrara is the Italian city of bicycles, where the use of this vehicle by citizens is among the highest in Europa. At every access of the city is placed a sign with the inscription "Ferrara city of bicycles" followed by the quote of joining the network Cities for Cyclists and Unesco recognition of world heritage cities. The historic city is in fact considered as an urban unit that prioritises the integration of the cycling component, while for the outside-city have been built special bike lanes that allow to reach many neighborhoods Peripheral. The awareness of being not only the Italian city with the highest number of cyclists but also at European levels, has led the Administration to dedicate since 1995 numerous projects and initiatives to improve and increase the use of the Bicycle.
