Greece, especially the Epirus region, is still unknown to the fly fisherman. The region of Epirus in the north of Greece is characterized by a unique, intact nature. The rivers provide the fly fisherman with quiet sections, deep pools and lots of shoots. Due to a rich natural history, it takes patience and skill to get the fantastically beautiful, strong-fighting native brown trout to the fly. A highlight is the fly fishing on the cleanest river in Europe, in the middle of a historic landscape. From 15 March to 30 October in the Aaos and Voidomatis rivers outside the Vikos - Aaos National Park (no fishing license required)
