

Zelengora mountain

Zelengora is a mountain range in the Sutjeska National Park. It has the highest altitude of 2,014 metres and it is located at the border with Montenegro, divided between 3 municipalities: Gacko, Kalinovik and Foča. Zelengora is now known as “a wilderness of outstanding beauty”. The eroded peaks of Zelengora that emerge from large mixed forests, attract, also because of the remoteness of the area, relatively few hikers. The wildness of the nature and the complete lack of signs of modern civilization gives these mountains a special appeal. The area around Orlovačko Jezero - and elsewhere - though, bears visible traces of historical habitation. The protection as part of the Sutjeska National Park of a large area of these mountains safeguards the integrity of the wilderness. A marked trail leading to the highest summit, Bregoč (2015 m.), starts at Orlovačko Jezero.
