Buna canal is the place where the river Buna flows into the Neretva. The Buna canals are not like other estuaries, and its special feature is the fact that the Buna forms a series of waterfalls before it joins the Neretva. At the mouth, nature provides the greatest splendor of colors, a combination of water, greenery and stone, and asks people how aware they are of the wealth they see. The scene is different every time, all depending on the season and the amount of water in the canal.
